Information for Submitting Articles to Law Reviews & Journals

July 2024

The following are two charts useful for the law review/journal article submission process. The first chart contains information gathered from the journals' websites about the following topics:

- Methods for submitting an article (such as by e-mail, Scholastica, or regular mail);
- Any special formatting requirements;
- How to request an expedited review; and
- How to withdraw an article after it has been accepted for publication elsewhere.

The second chart contains information about rankings of the journals and the law schools associated with them. The first three columns are the overall ranking, academic/peer assessment score, and lawyer/judge assessment score for each school from the most recent U.S. News & World Report rankings. The other columns are data about journals from Washington & Lee's law review ranking website, which covers 400 law journals, including online and specialized journals. The "citation ranking" is the total number of citations to the journal from 2019 to 2023. The "impact factor" is the number of citations per article per year. The "combined rating" is a weighted combination of the citations and impact factor data. You can find more detailed information on the Washington & Lee website at <https://managementtools4.wlu.edu/LawJournals/>.

We hope this information is helpful. We provide it with several important caveats:

- First, the charts cover only "general" law reviews, not specialized journals. There are excellent specialized journals on many topics. Anyone submitting an article to law reviews will want to consider the specialized journals relevant to their article and particular area of expertise.
- The charts cover 195 schools and their journals. We have tried to be comprehensive; any omissions are inadvertent, and we'd be happy to hear what we missed so that we can add them.
- We do not mean to imply anything about how much importance, if any, should be given to numerical rankings of law schools or law journals. These sorts of rankings are certainly an incomplete, if not badly flawed, way of evaluating schools and journals. We provide the ranking information because it is something that many people consider to some extent in the submission process. Obviously each author can decide what to make of it.
- The chart is based on the information provided on each journal's website. Some journals may have alternative methods of submission that are not mentioned on their website and therefore not included here.

For a helpful and more detailed discussion of the submission process and related issues for law professors, see Nancy Levit, Scholarship Advice for New Law Professors in the Electronic Age, 16 WIDENER L.J. 947 (2007), http://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=939007.

Good luck with your submissions.
